

Schuylkill County was created in 1811 from parts of Berks and Northampton Counties and named for the Schuylkill River, which rises from a spring near the small town of Tuscarora. The Delaware Indians originally referred to the river as Ganshohawanee or Manaiunk. Later, the river was given its current name by a European explorer from the Dutch West India Company. Schuylkill translates to "hidden river" and refers to the river's confluence with the Delaware River which was nearly hidden by dense vegetation.
